The best of both worlds

When Dr. Liza Schneider, founder of Holistic Vets, realised conventional medicines and surgeries weren't doing enough to help her patients, she decided it was time to rethink the industry.

Established in 2003, Holistic Vets is the first of its kind in the country to offer the best of both worlds, integrating all the advantages of conventional medicine and surgery with complementary therapies.

"We like to educate and empower our clients so they understand more about their animal's health and how to keep them healthy," says Liza.

"Often, when we give clients information about how to feed and care for their animals, it helps to keep them healthy in the long-term."

Holistic Vets has a nationwide client base, offering consultations by phone or in clinic, using a combination of surgery, conventional medicine and complementary therapies helping to find the right solution for your animal.

"If it does us out of work, we know we are doing our job well," adds Liza.
